JUDGE SAMUEL WILLIAM DEXTER AND DESCENDANTS

Nancy Arnold Van Blaricum, Dexter, Michigan

The following article contains much information and some direct quotes from Norma McAllister's book Judge Samuel William Dexter, with her permission. Much of the same information became the basis for articles and booklets at the Dexter Area Museum and in the Dexter Leader, all written by Mrs. McAllister. We in the Dexter Area are indebted to her for all her work as Historian for our Village. She was one of the founders of the Dexter Area Historical Society and the Dexter Area Museum.

Samuel William Dexter (18 Feb. 1792 - 6 Feb. 1863) was born in Charlestown, Massachusetts, the son of Samuel and Catherine Gordon Dexter. His father Samuel Dexter, a Harvard graduate, was a distinguished statesman, having at one time served as a United States Senator, Secretary of War and Secretary of the Treasury. Samuel W. Dexter was also a graduate of Harvard. In 1816 he moved to Athens, New York (which is on the Hudson River, south of Albany) where his cousin Andrew Dexter was in law practice. There he met and on 19 May 1816 married Amelia Augusta Prevost, the daughter of Major Augustine Prevost III. Amelia A. Prevost was born 14 June 1796 in New York. Samuel William and Amelia had a son named Samuel Prevost Dexter, born 21 March 1817 in Athens. He became a lawyer, never married and died in 1849. A second son, Augustine, was born 4 June 1820, but died in 1822, the same year as his mother Amelia. On 10 June 1824 Samuel William Dexter arrived in Michigan, accompanied by Orange Risdon, a surveyor who later settled in Saline Township. Samuel William Dexter purchased much land in Washtenaw County, including the site where Mill Creek met the Huron River. Here he had the first sawmill built and also a cabin to house the workers.

In the fall of 1824 Sam Dexter returned to Athens, New York, where he married Susan Dunham on 8 May 1825. She was born in Troy, New York, in 1809. Samuel and Susan Dexter came to Michigan in the summer of 1825 to establish residence in the town Dexter, named for his father, as he wrote in a letter to his cousin in 1825. They lived in the log house until a new frame home was erected on River Street, now called Huron Street.

This second home was quite large and was used to house the first post office and was made available to provide shelter for many new settlers while new cabins were built. The Dexters moved into the new home in 1827 and it served the community well, being used for many special events. Of special note was the large orchard behind the house. On 4 July 1827 there was a celebration held at the Dexter House where, among other events, Samuel W. Dexter spoke about railroad cars in England that were propelled by steam, reaching speeds of 30 and 40 miles per hour! This was so intriguing because the only railroad at that time in the states was a horse-drawn railroad from Albany to Schenectady, New York.

Samuel W. was appointed chief justice of the County Court in 1826 by Hon. Lewis Cass. He was also solicited to become a territorial delegate to Congress, but declined the office. In 1825 he purchased the land where Saginaw and Byron are now located. He platted the town of Byron. There is more information on his land dealings not only in Saginaw and Byron, but also Tecumseh and Eaton Rapids.

Judge Dexter's second wife Susan died in August 1827, leaving an infant son, who survived her by one month. They are both buried in what is now Forest Lawn Cemetery in Dexter, the earliest known burial there on the land given by Judge Dexter for that purpose. This child was one of the first white children born in Washtenaw County.

Samuel William Dexter married third in August of 1828, Millisent Bond (20 Aug. 1811-27 June 1899) in Conway, Mass., the daughter of Consider and Hannah (Harris) Bond. Although only 16 at the time of her marriage, Millisent took on the responsibilities and even was sworn in as an assistant Postmaster so she could deliver the mail when Samuel was involved with legal or other dealings.

To Millisent Bond* and Samuel W. Dexter* were born the following children. All were born in Dexter, Michigan, unless noted; those buried in Dexter are indicated with *. Burials after the third home, Gordon Hall was built, were in a family plot there, however, they were moved to what is now Forest Lawn Cemetery after the death of Millisent in 1899.

Descendants are living today, but only a handful are known to the writer. More information can be gained by reading Norma McAllister's book Judge Samuel William Dexter. Other information is also available at the Dexter Area Museum.

The second home on River Street was quite large and welcomed each new child, and continued to be used as a place for newcomers to stay while they built their first homes. However, when the railroad came through the town of Dexter (and Judge Dexter's Orchard) in 1841, it was decided that a new home was needed. Gordon Hall, the large antebellum style home west of Dexter, was erected during the years 1841,42, and 1843. As Judge Dexter had named the village for his father, Samuel Dexter, he named the grand home for his mother, Catherine Gordon.

The house was of Greek Revival Architecture, and had twenty-two rooms, nine of which had plastered fireplaces in them, and fifty-five windows, all with inside shutters. The floors were of yellow poplar, which for a long time were carpeted and later painted. A hallway extended across the house and a walnut banistered staircase reached to the second floor in an unbroken flight. It was built with hand hewn white oak virgin timber, with eleven inch deep supporting joists, anchored at the ends with heavy wooden pins. Some of the lumber was no doubt cut on the estate, but because it was difficult to cut the lumber as fast as it could be used, some came from Flint by ox-teams and some from Detroit by railroad. One piece of timber is said to be fifty feet long, without a knot. Brick was used between the studding, probably as insulation. Massive columns extend the full two stories in the front of the house and were made of pine strips, very carefully and skillfully joined. Calvin Fillmore, brother of Millard Fillmore, the United States President, was one of the designers and contractors of the house.

Gordon Hall (called the Dexter House or the Dexter Mansion by locals) became the site that many persons coming to Michigan sought out and visited. Presidents were entertained in Gordon Hall. Presidents Buchanan and Polk were said to have visited there. It is known that Millard Fillmore came to the area to visit his brother Calvin and could well have visited to see the home his brother helped build. John Depew, an Indian Commissioner, brought his grist to the mill in Dexter to be ground and frequently consulted Judge Dexter on law in connection with Indian affairs.

Samuel W. Dexter died in 1863 and Millisent lived in Gordon Hall until her death in 1899. At that time the estate was sold to Thomas Birkett. In 1916 it was sold to Dr. Charles Crumrine who began extensive renovations. However he died in 1924 and then we assume it was used as rental property until it was sold to Katherine Dexter McCormick, a granddaughter of Samuel W. and Millisent B. Dexter in January of 1939. Katherine employed Emil Lorch of the University of Michigan to renovate the house, but after 10 years, she donated the Estate to the University with the understanding that it would be preserved as a landmark. The University has maintained the property and we who drive by each day appreciate the historic significance of Gordon Hall and the land surrounding it.

We hope to be able to purchase the property for the people of the area and preserve it for our children and grandchildren. We of the Dexter Area Historical Society are attempting to raise the money necessary to purchase the property and to reconstruct the mansion so that we can share it with all as Samuel and Millisent did. Donations and/or pledges can be sent to: Dexter Area Historical Society – Save Gordon Hall, 3443 Inverness, Dexter, MI 48130. Make checks payable to: DAHS - Save Gordon Hall.

DETROIT TRANSCRIPT GRANTEE INDEX, WASHTENAW COUNTY, MICHIGAN

Transcribed by Greg DeFreytas. Ann Arbor, Michigan

The Detroit Transcript Index indexes the earliest transfer of land in Washtenaw County between private persons. This index appears in the Deed book labeled Grantee Index 1827-1848. Please note that a comparison of the names with the Grantor Index reveals that some of these names do not appear in the grantor index. The deeds themselves are found in the red leather Detroit Transcript book in the Washtenaw County Register of Deeds Office, 200 N. Main St., Ann Arbor. In this book also is written the original grantee and grantor indexes.
